THE ⟨logo⟩ HINDU

Search   GO

Published: May 19, 2015 18:17 IST | Updated: May 19, 2015 18:37 IST Bidar, May 19, 2015

Bidar-born professor's book on cloud computing a hit in

- RISHIKESH BAHADUR DESAI

The Hindu
Prof Rajkumar Buyya in China. Photo: Special Arrangement.

The Hindu
Cover of the book, 'Mastering Cloud Computing'. Photo: Special Arrangement.

Bidar too has become a part of the limelight surrounding the strengthening of India-China relations computer science from Australia is making waves in China.

Rajkumar Buyya, who heads the Cloud Computing Lab at Melbourne University, has co-authored a Foundations and Applications Programming', which has been translated and published in Chinese received good reviews.

Mr. Buyya is currently in China attending seminars and helping students of various institutions in t

The book has been authored by Prof. Buyya along with Christian Vecchiola, a colleague at Melbourn Madras Institute of Technology, Chennai.

The young engineer from Koutha village in Aurad taluk, studied in Mysuru an Bengaluru before wo project of Centre for Development of Advanced Computing.

He later left for Australia where he began research and teaching in the University of Melbourne in 2 Cloud Computing and Distributed Systems (CLOUDS) Laboratory in Melbourne. When the Univers company to commercialise its innovations, he named it Manjra Soft, on the river Manjra in his villa countries now. Governments of China and Mangolia have used his tools to develop high-speed train them to process satellite images.

The globe-trotting professor is regarded among the pioneers of cloud-computing. His books on the is part of the Melbourne-Chindia Cloud Computing (MC3) Research Network. He has collaborated USA.

He can be contacted at: http://www.buyya.com.

---

computing-a-hit-in-china/article7223799.ece

© The Hindu